Opening Doors of Opportunity

There are many examples of contractors who have opening doors of opportunity using OneRestore. In fact, there isn't enough space to name them all! Here are a few specific instances of success!

In San Francisco, CA, a restoration contractor used OneRestore to clean the Trans America building, one of the most recognizable buildings in the city. The success of such a high profile project led to even more job opportunities. The contractor has since cleaned many other landmark buildings in the "city by the bay".

In Trenton, NJ, a contractor was asked to clean a historic church. Although the contractor had little experience on jobs like this, he turned to OneRestore and OneRestore GEL to meet the challenge. The results were so astounding, the city asked them only days after completing the project to clean another historic church directly across the street.

More recently, a new customer used OneRestore to clean a school in Oil City, PA. His fantastic results led to him being asked to bid on cleaning the city hall, along with several other buildings. One school project has generated positive feedback and an expanded clientele.

What do these contractors, and many others, have in common?

They are working to grow their business and open new doors of opportunity. Using OneRestore has dramatically increased the contractor's visibility in the market place and enhanced their range of skills. Are you ready to try and grow your business?

Your Story Goes Here!

If you have a story of success, we'd like to hear about it. Simply e-mail us the project details: project name, location, type (new construction, restoration, paint stripping), products and methods used. Include before and after pictures of your work.

If we're able to use your story in a future article, we'll give you product free of charge with your next order. It's just that simple!

Is Social Networking right for you?

In today's technologically advanced society, almost everyone is involved in some sort of "social networking" group.

Whether it is Facebook, Twitter, LinkedIn or some other site, more and more people are logging in. Even the cleaning forums are part of this networking system!

Are any of these groups right for you and your business?

Certain sites are the best places to get advice from your peers, such as the cleaning forums. It's a great way to jumpstart your own research. Always double check the facts!

Depending on your line of work and your role with your company, LinkedIn could be an excellent tool. My personal experience has helped me network with several historical preservationists throughout the country. I just recently contacted someone needing an old limestone and brick building cleaned.

Overall, networking sites are tools that can offer opportunities and insider knowledge. Just remember, you can't believe everything you read on the internet!

IF TIMES ARE SLOW, GO SEE THE PROPERTY OWNERS FOR FALL MAINTENANCE!

As the season starts winding down in some parts of the country, there is still opportunities to generate new business. Just look to property owners that are looking to get some last minute maintenance taken care of before the inclement weather hits.

Perhaps the owners need stains removed or sidewalks cleaned, paint removed or surfaces prepped. No matter what the project is, you have the tools you need to make it happen.

There's absolutely no need for your season to end early. With the right tools and the right skills, you will be able to continue to generate revenue well into the cold weather!

Now ships non-hazardous!

Our easy to use efflorescence remover has recently been re-tested to determine if it meets the criteria to ship non-hazardous by the Department of Transportation. Upon further review - it passed!

We are now able to ship small quantities via UPS without having to charge the astronomical $25 fee that is added when products are hazardous. This means EF-fortless is more accessible and less costly to test!

If you haven't had the opportunity to try EF-Fortless when removing simple efflorescence, now is the time to get started. Call us or your local distributor for more information!
